These discounts apply only to unmixed, same VARIETY flats (for example, a whole flat of Vodka begonias – not a flat of all kinds of begonias).

Guarantee/Warranty

We do our best to ensure that we sell high quality plant material labeled true to name. If there is an error on our part, please contact us as soon as possible. With reasonable evidence of the error, we will gladly replace the plants or refund the original purchase price. However, our liability shall in no case exceed the original purchase price. Many factors affect plant growth and health; therefore, we give NO WARRANTY EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED as to plant performance, bloom times, height, habit, or hardiness after you take possession of the plant material. We strongly recommend that plants break dormancy before they are purchased. We give NO WARRANTY on plants purchased while dormant.

Useful Information

Likewise, we try to use good information on our tags and in our catalog. There are many opportunities for human error in the whole process of obtaining that information. Many of our tags come with the liners and the information contained is out of our control. Additionally, many plants may grow differently in different areas of the country. Please keep this in mind when using the information provided to make buying decisions.

Pot Sizes

In the horticultural industry, pot sizes are many times somewhat smaller than what they are commonly called, much like 2" x 4" lumber is really 1.63" x 3.63". In an effort to minimize some of the confusion this creates, we want to clarify what you can expect with our most common sizes:

- Bedding plants are grown in an industry-standard 1020 flat (11" x 22"). There are 12 cell packs per flat with 3 or 4 plants per pack.
- 2 ½" pots are 2.5" square by 3.25" to 3.5" deep and fit 32 to a flat. We may have availability of some items in a deep 6 pack which fit 36 plants per flat and are priced the same per plant as a 2 ½" pot.
- 4" square pots are 3" to 3.5" wide by 3" to 3.5" deep (depending on the manufacturer) and fit 18 to a flat. They are approximately the same size as a traditional 4" square pot.
- 4" round pots are 4" in diameter and 3.5" deep. Carry trays hold 14 pots per tray.
- 4" round deep pots are 4" in diameter and 4.5" deep. Carry trays hold 10 pots per tray.
- Round quart pots are approximately 4.7" in diameter by 4.5" deep and hold 1 quart of soil.
- Square 2 quarts (5.5" square deep perennial pots) are 5.25" square by 7" deep and fit 8 pots to a 1020 flat for easy handling. They hold only slightly less soil than a trade gallon.
- We do use full gallons on some items which are 7.5" wide by 7" deep. However, the majority of our gallon perennials are in trade (short) gallons that are 6" to 6.5" in diameter and 6" to 6.5" deep and hold about 2.68 quarts of soil. We are also using an 8" azalea pot (gallon) on some items that get fairly tall, because they have a wider footprint and are more stable. They are 8" in diameter by 6" deep and hold about 3.5 quarts.
- 2 gallon containers are usually trade 2 gallons which are 8.5" wide by 8.5" deep and hold about 1.5 gallons.
- 3 gallon containers are usually trade 3 gallons which are 10" wide by 9" deep and hold about 2.33 gallons of soil.

Plant Hardiness Zones

Most of the plants in our main perennial section show cold hardiness zones. The zones can sometimes change with the weather, and there are microclimates within zones (and often within individual gardens) in which the "rules" can be broken. The posted zones for any particular plant can also vary from one plant source to another. We use reputable sources for the information we list. We hope the information is helpful, but please understand that it is not a guarantee of survival. The USDA plant hardiness zone map is on our inside back cover for quick reference and you can learn more at <https://planthardiness.ars.usda.gov/>.

Frequently Asked Questions

- Is there a Mary/where is Mary? There was a Mary. Mary Hamby started the business in the mid-1970s as a backyard hobby. She had always enjoyed growing plants and she discovered she had a real knack for growing. The business grew through the years, adding greenhouses as she expanded. Mary semi-retired in 2002 and could be seen working in her garden beside the Sales' Office. Mary passed away in August 2009. Mary's Greenhouse is still a family-owned business with several family members playing key roles.
 - When is the best time to come for the biggest selection? This is a difficult question to answer because it depends on the weather. If we have an early spring, it is best to visit early to mid-March for perennials or early to mid-April for annuals. If you want to try to get both perennials and annuals in one trip, plan to come early to mid-April. The perennial selection may not be as good, but if you are only planning one trip this would allow for more annuals to be available. If we have a late spring, you could probably delay your trip two to three weeks.
 - Do you offer landscape design or installation? Unfortunately, we do not. Our expertise lies with growing plants in a greenhouse environment. While we do have a display garden on site and are constantly trialing new plants, we don't have anyone on staff that is a designer or installer to give advice. Because our staff is spread very thin during the spring when most of our customers visit, it is unlikely we will be able to research detailed plant information for you. We find the internet to be a useful tool if you need more information about a specific plant. If you need a garden design, please contact a landscape business in your area. We do not keep a list of landscapers.
 - How many greenhouses do you have? We have 52 full-sized greenhouses plus a few smaller ones that we cover with plastic during the cold months. If you combine all sizes, there are 63 at present.
 - Are you open all year? Yes, we are. Our hours change with the seasons and we do close for extended periods in July and December.
 - To whom do you sell? We sell wholesale and retail, but we are primarily a wholesale operation selling to other greenhouses, landscapers, and independent garden centers. Retail customers are welcome; however, we are a self-service operation. Many of our customers view shopping at Mary's as an adventure. Wear your walking shoes, bring some water, and stay awhile.
 - What is the difference between annuals and perennials? Annuals have to be planted every year. One of the benefits of annuals is their show of colors through the spring or summer. Examples are begonias, marigolds, and petunias. Perennials are plants that come back every year but don't normally bloom as long as annuals. Perennial gardens are very popular today, but some of the best gardens combine both annuals and perennials to get the benefits of both.
 - What is a biennial? Generally a biennial takes 2 years to go through its life cycle. Plants usually grow leaves the first year and bloom and produce seed the next (many of the ones we grow are treated as perennials). Sweet William (Dianthus barbatus) is an example.

Useful Information

- What is a native plant? This question has been debated by gardeners for years and there are different schools of thought. To us at Mary's, a native is a plant that was already here in mainland America when the first Europeans arrived. We tend to be conservative as to whether a plant is still considered a native if the genetics have been tampered with, for instance, as in hybrids. In our catalog, we try to denote a plant as native if it is the species or it is a selection/cultivar of the species.
- When is it safe to plant in the spring? We wish we knew! Generally, it is safe to plant after any danger of frost for most annuals and garden vegetables like tomatoes and peppers. Depending upon whom you ask, frost free dates here in Middle Tennessee range from mid-April to mid-May. Don't be fooled by early warm temperatures – we can still have a killing frost. The first of May is usually safe for tender plants. For perennials, they usually can be planted as early as March if they have adjusted to the outside temperatures. If you want to get a jump start on spring and plant early, be prepared to cover your plants with some type of insulating cloth. Be careful with plastic as it will freeze the plants wherever it touches.
